COURSE DESCRIPTION:

The focus of this course is the influence culture has on business. Companies possess unique sets of values, customs, traditions and meanings. Such "corporate cultures" embody not only the vision of the company but also influence its ethical standards and managerial practices. Companies, to be successful, must also understand their consumers and their needs within specific cultural contexts. Globalization and immigration have meant that most Canadian corporations are not only increasingly engaged in multinational trade and negotiation, but also have an increasingly ethnically diverse workforce.

The course begins by exploring the challenges businesses face and a general understanding of the anthropological concept of culture. After a brief history of the relationship between anthropology and business we look at how anthropological methods can be used to conduct fieldwork in organizations as well as understand consumers and design new products. This is followed by exploring the role of culture in organizations and how organizations can use this knowledge to advantage. We then look at the role culture plays in consumer decision making, and how current cultural trends impact the future of business. The course concludes with an exploration of the implications of conducting business in different cultural contexts as well dealing with a multicultural workforce.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

1. To acquire an appreciation of how the theory and methods of anthropology can be used to understand how an organization's culture influences the conduct of business.
2. To appreciate how an understanding the cultural context in which a corporation operates can improve its marketing efforts.
3. To gain an understanding of how the theory and insights of anthropology can positively influence the conduct of international business.
4. To develop critical thinking and writing skills through discussing issues in class.
