

Anthropology 552 – Field Studies in Primatology Spring 2017

Professor: Dr. Hugh Notman (hgwnotma@ucalgary.ca)

Office: ES 602B

Office Hours: by appointment

Course Description: Building on concepts and knowledge attained in ANTH 505, this course provides the practical component of field primatology training. It involves intensive practice in field methods of observational primate behaviour and forest ecology. Students are immersed in all behavioural data collection techniques and evaluated on their ability to employ them as required in order to produce accurate final tabulations of collected data. An additional component of this course is daily performance and conduct in Belize as a group member. Because students are working and living in teams (as most field primatologists do), the ability to manage and contribute positively to team dynamics is an essential component of fieldwork. Students receive extensive training prior to the field via a professionally-led group dynamics workshop, and they receive significant support and constructive feedback throughout their field experience from the instructor on their conduct with respect to the group. Course Hours: F(3-3) Prerequisite(s): ANTH 311 and Consent of the Department. Corequisite(s): Anthropology 553 and 505. Notes: Normally offered during Spring Term. MAY BE REPEATED FOR CREDIT

Learning Outcomes: At the end of ANTH 552, students will:

- be knowledgeable and versed in all aspects of behavioural sampling of wild primates
- be knowledgeable and versed in methods for characterizing forest habitat as it pertains to assessments of food quality and quantity
- have produced a research report on their tabulated data
- have developed best practice habits with respect to keeping a detailed field log
- have gained an appreciation of the need to positively represent their home country and institution while working in a foreign cultural context and benefiting from the natural heritage offered by that country

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

Academic integrity is essential to the pursuit of learning and scholarship in a university, and to ensuring that a degree from the University of Calgary is a strong signal of each student's individual academic achievements. As a result, the University treats cases of cheating and plagiarism very seriously. Non-academic integrity also constitutes an important component of this program.

For detailed information on what constitutes academic and non-academic misconduct, please refer to the following link: <http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k-2-1.html>

All suspected cases of academic and non-academic misconduct will be investigated following procedures outlined in the University Calendar. If you have questions or concerns about what constitutes appropriate academic behavior or appropriate research and citation methods, you are expected to seek out additional information on academic integrity from your instructor or from other institutional resources.

Where there is a criminal act involved in plagiarism, cheating or other academic misconduct, e.g., theft (taking another student's paper from their possession, or from the possession of a faculty member without permission), breaking and entering (forcibly entering an office to gain access to papers, grades or records), forgery, personation and conspiracy (impersonating another student by agreement and writing their paper) and other such offences under the Criminal Code of Canada, the University may take legal advice on the appropriate response and, where appropriate, refer the matter to the police, in addition to or in substitution for any action taken under these regulations by the University

TEACHING EVALUATIONS / USRI (Universal Student Ratings of Instruction)

At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses. Your responses make a difference, please participate!

Writing Across the Curriculum

Writing skills are not exclusive to English courses and, in fact, should cross all disciplines. The University supports the belief that throughout their University careers, students should be taught how to write well so that when they graduate their writing abilities will be far above the minimal standards required at entrance. Consistent with this belief, students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their University courses and, where appropriate, members of faculty can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Support, part of the Student Success Centre, can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance
