COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course, we will have weekly meetings to present and discuss readings on current issues in primatology. Our analysis will include both theoretical and methodological considerations. Topics may include ecology, population biology, social behaviour, cognition, and conservation. Specific topics will be finalized during the first meeting, taking into account the particular interests of the class. As this is a small seminar, students are expected to be very active participants in all discussions (see Course Assignments). The objective is to have students engaged with the material at an advanced level and be introduced to the kind of critical analysis of current research that is typical of post-graduate studies and beyond.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Students will be responsible for participation in discussion of weekly readings. In addition, students will be primary presenters on at least two research articles.

Presentations involve leading the discussion of the weekly reading, including a written outline to be handed out to the class. More information will be provided on how to structure presentations and lead discussions.

Seminar participation involves engagement in weekly seminar discussions, as well as brief written evaluations of presenters. Evaluations will be submitted to the instructor only, and are due weekly on Friday at 4 pm.

The final paper will be a literature review on an area of research of the student's choosing and approved by the instructor. Following the approach from weekly reading discussions, this will involve presenting research questions and a thorough discussion of proposed methods and analytical techniques for five research articles.
