Course Description

Individual weekly study in studio, with seminar-based discussions in research area. The seminar meets every two weeks throughout the entire academic year.

Prerequisites

Restricted to MFA or PhD students enrolled in the Art Department, or consent of the Department.

Objectives of the Course

The objective of this course is to provide students with an advanced level of understanding about contemporary art practice, and in particular their individual approaches within a wider critical framework. The combination of theory and practice in studio research will enable students to become familiar with the technical, technological, creative, theoretical and critical concerns that inform their artistic work. The course will prepare students for articulate writing and independent studio work required for exhibition and subsequent thesis work.

Textbooks and Readings

Recommended texts include: Sweet Dreams by Johanna Drucker; and Theory in Contemporary Art Since 1985 (Second edition), Zoya Kocur, which are available in the TFDL. Students should also be prepared to read appropriate sections of Companion to Contemporary Art Since 1945, by Amelia Jones, available for download free from the U of C Library to registered graduate students. Readings will also be handed out for discussion in relation to practice. In addition, students will be expected to read material related to their independent research, including those recommended by the instructor.

Assignments and Evaluation

The emphasis of grading is on the development of a cohesive body of work for exhibition and supporting paper

Assessment:	% weighting	Due Date
Writing on peer work	10%	According to schedule of selected artist
Group exhibition	10%	October 27
Two-person exhibition	25%	Dates in March, as per the schedule
Presentation of	10%	January/February
Final essay on own	25%	January 13
Participation	20%	September through April

Criteria for Evaluation

Criteria for exhibitions: Depth, range and quality of conceptualization; concept development over the year, including innovation, articulate expression, sophistication; technical development and use of medium (media), particularly its relationship and appropriateness to concept; presentational qualities and considerations of how the work is installed.

Criteria for writings: Depth of research, demonstrated through relevant literature review and citations; articulation of ideas and ability to formulate analysis and make connections; depth of reflection on practice, integrated into a discussion of studio work within format; organization of material formed from an outline, which includes attention to editing, salience and argument.

Criteria for presentation: Ability to synthesize and summarize points; attention to critical/creative research; clarity and organization.

Criteria for participation: Attendance at all scheduled classes, discussions and presentations is considered the minimum expectation. Contributions to discussions, including feedback to peers, is essential. Students must also be prepared to discuss any assigned readings, with the understanding that they have familiarized and analyzed these ahead of the class. All assignments and responsibilities are due on the scheduled date.

Registrar-Scheduled Final Exam – NO

There is no final examination in this course. Marks are based on term work.

Course Activities

This is a seminar-based class, preparing students to address critical and creative issues related to their graduate studio research. Students will be expected to prepare two exhibitions—a group and two-person exhibition for first year students—for critical discussion with the aim of generating deeper understanding about their own work and the work of others. Accompanying these exhibitions will be critical writing by their peers in the course, which will form the basis for discussion during that particular class. Students will also be expected to prepare an essay positioning their own work within a critical framework, with relevant illustrations, as well as a public presentation resulting from this research. Classes will be comprised of studio critiques and group discussions, critical readings and writing about art. The critical readings in art and related ideas will encourage discussion of issues relevant to a contemporary program of study, providing direction for independent research. These activities, along with independent work and tutorials, will attempt to ground the student's work within a critical framework relating to their own research concerns.

Students will also be expected to prepare one writing, 1,000-2,000 words double-spaced, on the work of a peer within the program, selected on the first day of class. This paper will form the initial interpretation and basis for the discussion in the gallery of that work, and will be due on the Tuesday of that student's exhibition. A second paper, due in January, will be on critically positioning your own work within a contemporary context. The essay will discuss a critical framework that is well integrated with your own studio production, making relationships between media/material, presentation strategies, and concept. It should be thought of as a prolonged and detailed artist statement, looking at it through a critical lens. This paper should be comprised of 2,000-2,500 words double-spaced, with illustrations of your creative research. Proper footnoting is essential in all writing, and a bibliography of works consulted is to be appended to the paper. Please include a word count at the end of the essay. It is strongly suggested that individual meetings with the instructor be scheduled to provide opportunity for continued development of research and writing.

In the second term, a short public presentation of your work, based on your essay, will be given. The presentation, no more than 15 minutes, will address salient ideas within your work, illustrated with a visual accompaniment.

Studio visits will encourage a progress within your own practice, and enable peer and instructor feedback in preparation for your exhibition. Students should expect a minimum of fifteen hours per week for out-of-class project completion, research and other course-related activity. Tutorial assistance will be arranged in consultation with the instructor. Topical readings will be assigned to students on an individual basis.

Note: It is the student's responsibility to keep a copy of each submitted assignment. Please hand in your written assignments directly to your instructor by the due date.

Writing/Plagiarism

Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it is a serious academic offense. Consequences include failure on the assignment, failure in the course and possibly suspension or expulsion from the university. You must document not only direct quotations but also paraphrases and ideas where they appear in your text. A reference list at the end is insufficient by itself. Readers must be able to tell exactly where your words and ideas end and other people's words and ideas begin. This includes assignments submitted in non-traditional formats such as Web pages, and material taken from such sources. Please consult your instructor or Writing Support Services (at the Student Success Centre) if you have any questions regarding how to document sources.

Visual art projects submitted for course credit must be produced specifically for this class. Students must not submit a project if credit has or will be provided for it in another class. This includes re-worked assignments from previous or concurrent courses, unless permission is provided in writing by the instructor. Additionally, the student is asked to be mindful of using visual sources from the internet, ensuring that appropriate copyright permission is granted, when required.
