Course Description: In this course you will be translating ancient Greek oratorical texts, focusing on the work of Lysias (c. 445-380 BCE). By this means not only will you be continuing to master your knowledge of Greek grammar and vocabulary, you will also be learning about Greek rhetoric and law. You will continue to be tested on Greek morphology and syntax in order to consolidate the material you have learned so far.

Core Competencies: By the end of your course your ability to translate and analyse ancient Greek will have reached a new level through the reading of original works. You will also have learnt more broadly issues about contemporary Attic culture and gained familiarity with ancient rhetorical principles as they were applied practically in the law courts of the day.
