About RelS 205:

This is a Religious Studies "Nature Stream" course with a "205" designation. That means it deals with the study of religion. It is not about Buddhism, Christianity, Hinduism, Islam, or any other major religious tradition. Rather, it is about the practical and theoretical study of religion. During the course examples will be used from major religious traditions, particularly Christianity, as well as less known ones. If you are looking for a course on Buddhism or Hinduism enrol in an "Eastern Stream" course with the course designation "203." If you want to take a course on Christianity, Islam or Judaism, then you need a "Western Stream" course with a designation "201." 200 level courses are designed as introductory courses intended to prepare students for more advanced study. If you are a fourth year student fulfilling a requirement you ought to have completed earlier in your career you must expect this course to be elementary.

Course description:

The University of Calgary Calendar provides the following general course description for Rels 205:

“An introduction to the academic study of religion with particular emphasis on the nature of religion and the relationship of religion to contemporary thought and culture.”

The emphasis in this particular section of Rels 205 is on "the study of religion." In this course, various theoretical concepts related to the study of religion will be introduced and discussed in specific historic and geographic settings. The setting for this year's course is Great Britain – hence the travel guide.

An effort will be made to show how religious ideas relate to social and political life as well as practical pursuits such as modern tourism. The course is based on lectures and course readings. The course begins with a discussion of the nature of the university followed by various definitions of the term "religion" and an analysis of some key terms in the field of religious studies. The role of theory in the interpretation of religion will be examined through brief excerpts from the writings of Tom Paine, Ludwig Feuerbach and Karl Marx. Issues of academic scholarship, method and theory in the study of religion will be discussed. Weekly topics are listed in the lecture outline below.

Course requirements and grading:

Lectures begin on January 10 and end on April 15.

Reading Days are February 20-27.

All tests will be based on the readings, books, and lectures.

First Test worth 40% of the final grade will be held on Tuesday 15 February.
Second Test worth 40% of the final grade will be held on Tuesday 29 March.

Research assignment worth 20% of the final grade is due Thursday 14 April. Details of the research assignment, which is based on the Travelers Guide, will be given at the end of this outline. Only hard copy papers will be accepted. Do not send them by email.

* Students must take the test on the assigned day or have a valid medical note.

* Late papers will lose 10 points per day.

There will be no Registrar scheduled final exam for this course.

Grading

A numerical mark will be given for each course requirement. A letter grade will be assigned on the following number and letter grade scheme:

A+	100 - 96	A	95 - 90	A-	89 - 85
B+	84 - 80	B	79 - 75	B-	74 - 70
