Required Text(s):

There is no set textbook. A coursepack of selected readings will be available from the Bookstore.

Other set readings can be downloaded electronically from Library's journal collection. A detailed list of readings will be available at first class as well as on D2L

Course Description:

This course will be an examination of the development and flourishing of a form of philosophy known as existentialism. Intimately connected with the idea of the "death of God", it takes both atheistic and religious forms. Its major themes revolve around notions of identity, individual responsibility, bad faith, and the relevance of philosophy for a meaningful life. This mode of philosophy will also be examined regarding any continuing relevance it may have for the contemporary world and issues of intersubjectivity and ethics.

Online elements for this course:

The Desire2Learn system will be used for communication, reporting grades on tests and exams, and posting notes and announcements.

Core Competencies:

As this course is basically a seminar, students will be expected to undertake close readings of the assigned material and come to class prepared to discuss it. Basic skills required will be of both an analytical and discursive nature. Students will be expected to identify primary concepts and themes in primary source material. Written assignments will provide the students with the opportunity to hone their writing skills by cogent and well-organized reflective papers on information gained either from class discussions and/or research. A major essay will be required at the end of the term.

Course Requirements:

Four Response papers

Dates	Assessment	Weight (%)	Required pass/fail
4th October	Response paper	15%
27th October	Response paper	15%
15th November	Response Paper	15%
29 th November	Response paper	15%
Various Dates	Class Presentation	15
3rd December	Final essay	25%
