COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course examines the lives of Indian and Tibetan Buddhist masters within the social historical context of India and Tibet. The course will examine the lives of the following four individuals: Atiśa Dīpaṅkaraśrījñāna (982-1054), Sönam Peldren (1328-1372), Tsongkhapa (1357-1419), and Gendun Chopel (1903-1951).

Course Ethos

This course requires a high degree of self-motivation. The study of the lives of Buddhist masters is truly a demanding intellectual task, for which a robust reading requirement is a necessary component, and we will examine a number of sources that will not be familiar to all. Furthermore, this is a seminar course. Rather than following the lecture format, we will have discussions, and for discussions to be substantive, disciplined, and thought-creating, it means that seminar members must do the readings and attend the seminar with the intention to contribute to the course Conferences.

Course Organization and Requirements: The course is organized on a lecture/discussion basis following the topics and readings listed in the tentative schedule (distributed in class and separately posted on the course D2L website). Students are expected to keep up with the reading schedule. Each student is required to participate in seminar meetings and write four critical response essays. Students should consult the posted lecture notes and required textbooks to become familiar with concepts utilized in the course. The instructions and parameters for the critical response essays will be distributed in class and posted on the course D2L website.

Core Competencies: Students will gain university level skills in the study and understanding of Asian religion and culture with specific attention to the portrayal and representation of Buddhist holy persons in the cultures of India and Tibet. Students will become familiar with how the lives of Buddhist masters, along with their portrayal and representation, grew out of, and reflects, unique historical, geographical, and cultural conditions.
