Course description: This course provides an introduction to contemporary theoretical practices, as well as an introduction to certain historical debates in Western and global philosophies around questions of art. The contemporary approaches we will discuss will include formalism, structuralism, poststructuralism, Marxism, psychoanalysis, feminism, postcolonial theory, queer theory, new historicism, cultural studies, reader response theory, ecocriticism and critical race theory. Students will learn to improve their understanding of the rhetoric of literary theory, and how to apply these theoretical approaches in their readings of literary and other texts.

Many of the readings in this course are especially challenging, and because this is a condensed course, it is imperative that students keep up with the reading schedule.

Prerequisite: Two half-course equivalents of English and/or Comparative Literature, or consent of the Department

Texts and readings:

Parker, Robert Dale, ed. Critical Theory: a Reader for Literary and Cultural Studies

Parker, Robert Dale. How to Interpret Literature: Critical Theory for Literary and Cultural Studies

Hardy, Thomas. Life's Little Ironies

Assignments and Evaluation:

Participation	10%
Major Research Paper	30%
Shorter paper	15%
Group Presentation	15%
Tests (3x10%)	30%
	100%

There is no Registrar-scheduled final exam in this course.

Participation is a measure of your attendance and preparation, and will be evaluated through a number of methods, including pop quizzes, group work, and my general observations of your attendance and contributions to class discussion. The research paper will be due towards the end of term; further details on this paper will be given in class. The shorter paper will ask you to compare different theoretical approaches to a film; further details will be announced in class. The group presentations will be made up of groups of from 4-5 and will be on a particular theoretical school or approach; you will summarize for the class one chapter on a particular theoretical approach in How to Interpret Literature, and use a Hardy story to demonstrate what that theoretical approach might say about the story. If you do not have a group presentation lined up by the end of May, please let me know and I will find a group for you to join. In lieu of a final exam there will be three tests, one roughly every two weeks. Each of these will be worth 10% and will take place on Thursdays.

You do not have to complete all assignments to receive a passing grade in this course. Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized (e.g. with the loss of a third of a grade for each day [not class] that the assignment is overdue). Extra-credit assignments will not be offered.

Note: Please make all efforts to take assignments directly to the instructor. If it is not possible to do so, take your assignment to SS1152 and place it in the drop-box. Your assignment will then be date-stamped and placed in your instructor's mailbox. Please keep a copy of your assignment in case of loss by any cause. Assignments cannot be returned by staff in the Department office. E-mailed submissions will not be accepted and will be deleted.

Note regarding technologies:

Please turn off all communication devices during class. Laptop computers are acceptable in class as long as they do not present a distraction to others. I reserve the right to ban computers from the class if anyone's computer presents a distraction. I am happy to answer inquiries via e-mail but please note that proper e-mail etiquette should be followed, and that what you consider 'urgent' may not be considered urgent by others. I will not respond to inquiries over e-mail regarding matters I have addressed in class.

Note regarding textbooks:

Much of this class will involve close readings from theoretical and literary texts. As such, students are required to have the texts to be discussed with them in class. Students who consistently do not have the texts with them in class will receive a grade of '0' for participation, after a written warning from the instructor.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:

- (a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
- (b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
- (c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,
- (d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student's work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, (<http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/j.html>) "The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, ..., to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community". This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
