Course description (calendar):

A survey of Canadian literature from 1950 to the present.

Prerequisite(s): 60 units including 3 units of courses labelled English at 300 level or above.

Course description (course-specific):

Welcome to English 473: Canadian Literature since 1950! I am looking forward to our semester together. Let me say, right away, that in my own thinking I am moving away from talking about “Canadian literature” and instead tend to use the phrase “literatures in Canada” wherever possible. As a unit, the Department of English is in the process of renaming this course and several similar ones accordingly. The reasons have to do with current debates in the field about the literatures produced in the state currently called Canada. Does Canada own the literatures produced here? That is, are they necessarily “Canadian”? There is no consensus on this view, and my own phrasing intends to recognize the openness of the debate. I will signal, too, that I am of the view that the historical evolution of a thing – like literatures created in Canada – comes from multiple competing and intersecting genealogies. Single or simple origins are, in other words, something that we can always question, as we will do in this course.

English 473 takes place at the University of Calgary. The University’s main campus is situated in the city of Calgary, which is known as Mohkintsis in the Blackfoot language. The University is situated in Treaty 7 territory, a treaty signed in 1877 between representatives of the British Crown and the Blackfoot or Niitsitapi Confederacy (Siksika, Pikani, and Kainai Nations), the Stoney Nakoda Nations (Wesley, Bearspaw, and Chiniki), and the Tsuut’ina Nation. Calgary is also home to the Métis Nation of Alberta, region 3. The University is only here, then, due to treaty relationships established in 1877. This fact alone shapes the learning that takes place in this course, in that this is a place of ongoing Indigenous presence. It is a place marked by story long before the state of Canada was created, let alone anything like “Canadian literature.”

As we move forward, these issues will shape the conversations that we will have. I think of this course as one that asks questions about when and how we decide to include texts in a classroom like ours. What texts should we study? How should we study them? What is the purpose in doing so? I hope that these are all questions that you will collectively engage with me as the semester unfolds. As Cherokee writer (and one-time University of Lethbridge faculty member) Thomas King famously put it, “the truth about stories is that that’s all we are.” What stories do we want to tell, from our vantage point in the fall of 2022, about the literatures created in the state known as Canada that were published or created between 1950 and today? How might these contribute to how we tell our own stories?

As we get down to work on these questions, I want to note that the texts that we examine in this course are sometimes challenging ones. The depictions that we find in these texts may at times be unsettling, inadequate, or problematic in the context of our contemporary understandings. That said, I endeavour throughout our studies to highlight texts that might help us to build positive narratives. Should you find any of our texts upsetting, I encourage you to approach me for guidance or to seek appropriate supports.

Course learning outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, you will be able to:

1. Demonstrate your understanding of the consolidation of literatures and literary studies in Canada since 1950;
2. Demonstrate your understanding of current debates within the field;
3. Understand how approaches to literary studies can produce multiple readings of a text;
4. Analyze how intersections of race, gender, class, sexuality, and national or worldwide history can shape literary studies in Canada;
5. Formulate and defend significant arguments in which you analyze, evaluate, and synthesize material effectively;
6. Work collaboratively with others in developing an argument related to a text’s historical and contemporary importance;
7. Structure a complex and engaging argument; and
8. Present your own analysis of a text within the context of literary studies in Canada.

Assessments and Evaluation:

Student results for this iteration of English 473 will be determined via the following assessments:

1. Short Essay: 25%
2. Group Project: Assessing Anthologies: 30%
3. Long Essay Proposal: 10%
4. Long Essay: 35%

Short Essay (25%): Early in the semester, you will be asked to write a short essay in response to a set of possible prompts that will be distributed in class. Expected length: 1200-1500 words. Due date: October 6.

Group Project: Assessing Anthologies (30%): This two-part assignment will ask you, working in a small group, to assess and evaluate the ways in which texts in our anthology (or, optionally, a competing, similar anthology) can be used in a course like ours. Groups will share their findings with the class through ten-minute presentations and will submit a write-up of this work. Expected length: 1500-2000 words (submitted as a group). Due date: presentations on October 27, November 1, or 3; write-ups due on November 10.

Long Essay Proposal (10%): This brief assignment will ask you to submit an abstract in preparation for your long essay. A list of possible topics will be distributed in class. Expected length: 300-500 words. Due date: November 10.

Long Essay (35%): The final assessment for this course will be a long essay that you will complete in response to the possible topics list distributed in class, building on your essay proposal. Expected length: 2000-2500 words. Due date: December 13.

Late assignments: Assignments submitted after the deadline will be penalized with the loss of a 3% for each calendar day (not class meeting) that the assignment is overdue. No assignments will be accepted one week past the assignment deadline without my prior consent.

Additional notes: Please see the detailed assignment guidelines for each assignment for additional details and explanations (posted to D2L). Note that there is no registrar-scheduled final exam for this course. Students should submit their work electronically via D2L's dropbox in .docx format.

Attendance and participation expectations:

Please plan to attend class on a regular basis; we will develop a series of interconnected discussions over the course of the semester, and missing elements of this conversation will negatively impact your understanding of the intellectual traditions on which we are building. While there is no formal participation grade, do know that attendance is a basic expectation of this course. Should you miss class, too, please note that I will not be able to catch you up to our conversations either during office hours or via email.

Conduct:

Students, employees, and academic staff are expected to demonstrate behaviour in class that promotes and maintains a positive and productive learning environment. As members of the University community, students, employees, and academic staff are expected to demonstrate conduct that is consistent with the University of Calgary Calendar, the Code of Conduct and Non-Academic Misconduct policy and procedures, which can be found at:

<http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k.html>

Policy on use of electronic devices:

The use of laptop and mobile devices in class is acceptable when used in a manner appropriate to the course and classroom activities. Please refrain from accessing websites and resources that may be distracting to you or to other learners during class time. Students are responsible for being aware of the University's Internet and email use policy.

Grading System:

This course uses the following standard grading scale:

90 + %	A+	4.0	67 – 69 %	C+	2.3
85 – 89 %	A	4.0	64 – 66 %	C	2.0
80 – 84 %	A–	3.7	60 – 63 %	C–	1.7
77 – 79 %	B+	3.3	55 – 59 %	D+	1.3
74 – 76 %	B	3.0	50 – 54 %	D	1.0
70 – 73 %	B–	2.7	0 – 49 %	F	0

Please note the following:

- Although the A+ is solely an honorific that entails no additional points in the four-point system, I will employ this mark to distinguish superlative work that far exceeds expectations in style, correctness, intellectual depth and breadth, sophistication, and originality.
- The interpretation of the undergraduate university grading system can be found at <https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/f-1-1.html>
- There is no D- grade.
- There are no extra credit assignments available in this course.
- Students need not pass any particular assessment in order to pass this course.
- In calculating final grades, students must have surpassed the minimum grade threshold to qualify for any letter grade — that is, grades will never be rounded up into the nearest grade category even if very close to that minimum threshold.

Academic Integrity:

This course, like all courses at the University of Calgary, holds students to high standards of honest and responsible scholarship. Please consult the Academic Integrity website for a detailed description of university policies, which will be enforced in this course. Cases of suspected academic misconduct will be referred to the Associate Dean of Arts for a ruling.

Plagiarism is a type of academic misconduct. Plagiarism occurs when a student presents the ideas, expression of ideas, or work of another person as their own. Another equally serious form of plagiarism occurs when a student submits something they have written themselves for credit in two or more courses without first securing written permission from all those course instructors. Consequences for plagiarism include failure on the assignment, failure in the course, and possible suspension or expulsion from the university. Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it is a serious academic offense.

Deferral of term work and final examinations:

Should you require an extension for completion of term papers or assignments beyond the deadline of five days after the end of lectures, an Application of Deferment of Term Work must be completed. It is the student's responsibility to initiate this process with the instructor. The University also has regulations governing the deferral of final examinations.

Grade appeals:

To pursue a Reassessment of Graded Term Work or a Reappraisal of an Academic Assessment, Consult the University Calendar and request advice from the English Department at engl@ucalgary.ca. Please note that mere dissatisfaction with a grade is not sufficient grounds for an appeal.
