

Course Title: Historical Explorations within the Contemporary Canadian Novel
Course Number	ENGL 677	WINTER 2020
Faculty / Department	Faculty of Arts/Department of English
Instructor Name	A. Van Herk	Email	vanherk@ucalgary.ca
Office Location	SS 1132	Telephone No:	403-220-5481
Office Hours	Tuesday/Thursday, 14:00-16:00 or by appointment
Class Dates/Times/Location	Wed, 12:30-15:15

This course will examine various readings of history as an inflected space represented within contemporary Canadian fiction.

The Canadian “historical novel” has proceeded from a moment of narrative transparency to a position that questions its own reading of history’s wounds, denouncing the texture of received information and yet seeking to impose a version of narrative order. Can such referential restraints provide a space within which the assumptions of particular social, cultural, and historical moments be examined and critiqued? Is this focus nostalgic or revisionist? Contemporary Canadian historiography appears to be interested in examining subversive or anti-heroic characters, who nevertheless occupy a time and space emblematic of “national character.” At the same time, historiographic representations of landscape, gender, class, region and religion encompass economic, social, and cultural contingencies, all relevant to the construction of a literature within a nation diverse and dispersed in terms of cultural coherence. This course will apprehend these questions by reading a selection of novels that look to history or a particular historical moment as their initiating impulse.

Assignments:

1.	In-Class Presentation/paper:	20%
2.	Short Paper #1 (1000 words):	20%
3.	Long #2 (4000 words) research paper:	40%
4.	Class participation (see below):	10%
5.	Contributions to Critical Bibliography (see below):	10%
		100%

A student MUST complete ALL of the above assignments in order to pass this course. There is NO group work in this class. There is NO final examination in this course.

In-Class Presentations and subsequent documentation of presentation:

Each student is required to make 1 short (no longer than ten minutes) critical presentation on one of the texts in the course, addressing a specific aspect of historical declension. This oral but well-researched presentation should be primarily based on textual analysis and relevant background critique. The class will engage the presenter in discussion. Students should clear their subject and approach with me. Then, taking class feedback and discussion into account, the student will hand in a written version of the presentation. This work altogether falls under the In-Class Presentation percentage.

1. Short Paper (1000 words):

Each student (by the indicated date) will hand in a short (1000 word) analytical essay.

Topics will be handed out early in the course.

2. Long research paper (4000 words):

Your long research paper (publishable length) must demonstrate a fairly sophisticated employment of theory. You will be asked to choose one aspect of historicity and historical narrative and to discuss its configuration with relation to a theoretical question. I will hand out possible topics, but students will be free to derive their own, providing they clear their topics with me.

3. Bibliography Contributions:

You should be reading a good deal of criticism and theory as background for this class.

Since this is a graduate level course, students are required bring to every class (and to post on D2L) a secondary reference relevant to the Canadian historical novel. This can be a theoretical work, or a paper on a particular author or text. This will enable us to build a comprehensive bibliography together.

4. Class Participation:

It is futile to take this course if you do not read the materials in advance and if you fail to come to class prepared to discuss the work in an intelligent and intellectual manner. Students must contribute to in-class analysis and argument. Please be prepared to address the subject at hand without resorting to jejeune vocabulary, especially such catch phrases as “thing,” “like,” and “you know.” I expect a reasonable level of eloquence.

Grading System

The following grading system will be used in this course. You will receive a letter grade on all assignments. I grade you as graduate students, and expect you to produce graduate level work.

University of Calgary's 4 point system:

A+/A (4.0); A- (3.7); B+ (3.3); B (3.0); B- (2.7); C+ (2.3); C (2.0); C- (1.7); D+ (1.3); D (1.0); F (0)

90 + %	A+	4.0
85 – 89 %	A	4.0
80 – 84 %	A–	3.7
77 – 79 %	B+	3.3
74 – 76 %	B	3.0
70 – 73 %	B–	2.7
67 – 69 %	C+	2.3
64 – 66 %	C	2.0
60 – 63 %	C–	1.7
55 – 59 %	D+	1.3
50 – 54 %	D	1.0
0 – 49 %	F	0

Late assignment policy: Assignments submitted after the deadline will drop a grade per week. Thus, a B+ paper that is two weeks late will drop to a B-.

Please note: A B- is considered a minimum pass for students in the Faculty of Graduate Studies. <https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/grad/current/gs-h-2.html>

Although the A+ is solely an honorific that entails no additional points in the four-point system, the course instructor will employ this mark to distinguish superlative work that exceeds expectations in style, correctness, intellectual depth and breadth, sophistication, and originality.

Please use MLA style to format your papers.

E-mail:

I am happy to reply to short, specific questions via e-mail, and will answer as promptly as possible, usually within 48 hours. If you have detailed questions on the course material it is more appropriate to make an appointment and see me in my office. Essays and course work must be submitted in class, on the due date and in printed form, unless other specific arrangements have been made. In particular, submitting work by e-mail without prior agreement is not an acceptable alternative to handing in work on time, in class.

HOW TO DO WELL IN THIS COURSE

1. Be sure that you are ready to take this course. The reading load is heavy, and students are expected to perform at a very high level. Class attendance is not optional. You will have difficulty passing this course if you do not attend.
2. The schedule for this class is provided to enable you to plan your work in advance. Please use it to ensure that you are ahead in your reading, that you meet deadlines, and that you know what is going to be discussed in each class. Please make an extra copy of the schedule and keep it in a safe place. I do not appreciate students e-mailing me to find out “what we’re going to do in class” or whether they “missed anything important.”
3. Although I am aware of the difficulties of speaking in public and I am sympathetic to shyness, class participation is important. An engaged and contributing student inevitably does better than a student who merely occupies a chair.
4. The literature we are reading is to be discussed in class with intellectual eloquence, using literary terminology. As a graduate level class, this course is not interested in feeling or personal reaction, but intelligent, thoughtful responses.
5. While I am happy to answer queries on e-mail, this course will not be conducted via e-mail. I will not e-mail students the notes of a lecture they have missed. However, if you are having difficulties of any kind, or if you have questions, please feel free to meet with me. If you cannot make an appointment during my regular office hours, which are clearly listed, I am happy to arrange to meet at another time. Do not hesitate to inform me of potential difficulties, illness or family concerns, and please don’t leave a problem until it is too late to solve easily.
6. Assignments should be handed to me (in person) in hard copy, double spaced and one-sided. I prefer not to receive essays via e-mail attachment. If for some reason you are forced to hand in an assignment to the Department office, please ensure that your name, your student number, your e-mail, and my name and the course number are on the paper before leaving it in the dropbox at SS 1122. Please be aware that assignments cannot be returned by the staff in the Department office.
7. The goal of this course is to explore an area of Canadian literature that is rich and dense, much-studied and yet so ubiquitous that it is almost taken for granted. Questions about the national canon will necessarily be raised, as well as questions of validity and cultural contingency. The outcome should enable you to read rich texts with close attention, to analyze their narrative positioning, and to work across literature and history in terms of cultural critique.
8. This promises to be an exciting class on a specific strand of Canadian fiction. This literature both reflects the country we occupy and yet asks questions about our national, regional and local assumptions and how they are presented in fiction.

Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI):

"At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses (www.ucalgary.ca/usri). Your responses make a difference – please participate in USRI Surveys."

Students who are absent from class assessments (tests, participation activities, or other assignments) should inform their instructors as soon as possible. Instructors may request that evidence in the form of documentation be provided. If the reason provided for the absence is acceptable, instructors may decide that any arrangements made can take forms other than make-up tests or assignments. For example, the weight of a missed grade may be added to another assignment or test. For information on possible forms of documentation, including statutory declarations, please see <https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/m-1.html>.

PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is an extremely serious offence. Please read the following information carefully. The penalty routinely recommended by the English Department for documented plagiarism is failure of the course in which the offence occurred; academic probation is also routinely applied at the Faculty level. Suspension or expulsion can result from severe or repeated plagiarism.

The University Calendar states:

1. Plagiarism - Essentially plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:

- a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),
- b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,
- c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,

- d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted.

Plagiarism occurs when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement, or when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. Citing your sources in a bibliography is not enough, because a bibliography does not establish which parts of a student's work are taken from other sources. MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose. Advice on adequate documentation can be found at the following web sites:

<http://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/747/01/>

Students who are absent from class assessments (tests, participation activities, or other assignments) should inform their instructors as soon as possible. DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH STATEMENT ON PRINCIPLES OF CONDUCT

According to the University Calendar, <https://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k-2.html>

“The University of Calgary community has undertaken to be guided by the following statements of purpose and values: to promote free inquiry and debate, to act as a community of scholars, . . . , to respect, appreciate, and encourage diversity, [and] to display care and concern for community”. The Department of English, like the university as a whole, is committed to a “positive and productive learning and working environment.” This environment is characterized by appreciation and encouragement of diversity and respect for the dignity of all persons: students, support staff, and faculty. The department will not tolerate unacceptable behaviour, such as threatening gestures, threatening or abusive verbal or written communication (including e-mails), or any conduct that “seriously disrupts the lawful education and related activities of students and/or university staff”. Any cases of such misconduct should be reported immediately to the department Head, who, depending on the nature and severity of the incident, may then take further appropriate action.
