Introduction

Over the past several decades governments, corporations, not for profit and community organizations and citizens have been struggling to understand the implications of rapid industrialization, population growth, resource depletion, and information technology on our health, happiness and quality of life. The concept of sustainability has played a key role in the debates. Sustainability offers a new way of understanding the world and our place in it. It has become a key concept in design at all scales of human intervention in the world. Sustainability, both in theory and practice is complex and challenging. This course will present a wide range of perspectives on the vitally important concept.

Objectives

By the end of this course students will be able to:

1. Explain, debate, critique and defend foundational concepts and theories of sustainability.
2. Formulate and articulate values consistent with sustainability (e.g. our place in the natural world, inter and intra-generational ethics, diversity, equity and social justice)
3. Analyze real world problems, issues and debates and design solutions consistent with sustainability theories, concepts and values.
3. Demonstrate an understanding of how they can contribute to creating a sustainable world in their personal, academic and work lives.

Teaching Approach

Your course instructors and guest speakers will offer perspectives on sustainability from business, government, the not for profit sector and academia. Topics will cover a range of scales, from the smallest devices we use on a daily basis, to neighbourhoods, cities, countries and critical international issues. Classes will include lectures, videos, discussions, and active participation in group work and learning activities. We will be bringing real world issues into the classroom on a regular basis. You will be encouraged to be engaged in the course, asking questions, challenging speakers, formulating your own ideas. The course will introduce the idea of inter-disciplinarity with a diverse group of guest speakers from The Arts, Sciences, Social Sciences, Professionals and communities of practice, all with a common interest in understanding, educating about and practicing sustainability.

Means of Evaluation

Notes:

- Written work, term assignments and other course related work may only be submitted by e-mail if prior permission to do so has been obtained from the course instructors. Submissions must come from an official University of Calgary (ucalgary) email account.
- It is the student's responsibility to request academic accommodations. If you are a student with a documented disability who may require academic accommodation and have not registered with the Disability Resource Centre, please contact their office at 220-8237. (<http://www.ucalgary.ca/drc/node/46>) Students who have not registered with the Disability Resource Centre are not eligible for formal academic accommodation. You are also required to discuss your needs with your instructor no later than fourteen (14) days after the start of this course.
- Plagiarism - Plagiarism involves submitting or presenting work in a course as if it were the student's own work done expressly for that particular course when, in fact, it is not. Most commonly plagiarism exists when:(a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test),(b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author,(c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or,(d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course(although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved. While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted. Plagiarism is an extremely serious academic offence. It is recognized that clause (d) does not prevent a graduate student incorporating work previously done by him or her in a thesis. Any suspicion of plagiarism will be reported to the Dean, and dealt with as per the regulations in the University of Calgary Graduate Calendar.
