

HTST 345 L 01
Canadian Native History
MWF 14:00-14:50
Fall 2013
Dr. Heather Devine, Instructor

This interdisciplinary lecture course examines the history and culture of Native Peoples in Canada from the beginnings of human occupation to the present. Course emphasis will be placed on the evolving social, political, and economic relationships between different aboriginal groups (i.e. First Nations, Métis, and/or Inuit) and various colonial and Canadian governments, Assignments, readings, and examinations will emphasize the impact of these historical relations on contemporary Canadian society .

REQUIRED TEXTS – available at Bookstore

J.R. Miller, ed. Sweet Promises: A Reader on Indian-White Relations (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1991).

History 345 Book of Readings – Fall 2013