

HTST 367: Latin America since Independence

Professor: A. Kiddle

Winter 2014

Tuesday/Thursday 9:30-10:45

This course introduces students to key themes and debates in modern Latin American history. Using political, economic, social, cultural, and gender history, we will survey significant political and economic events and processes in Latin American history, with a focus on how these broader trends intersected with cultural and social change in an ethnically diverse and economically stratified society.
