Overview

This course will provide an introduction to the international history of energy. It will examine the history of energy in an international context since the mid-19th century and engage with a number of approaches, including diplomatic history, international relations and international political economy, that can be adopted in such examinations. Addressing the role of energy in international conflict and cooperation, we will study select events and determine the historical role of governments, international institutions and multinational corporations. We will also investigate how broader developments such as the energy transition from the mineral to the carbon age as well as the Cold War have on the international history of energy.

This is a lecture course based on two books and academic research articles but there will also be time to discuss the assigned readings. Students are expected to actively participate in these discussions. The lectures will be structured chronologically as well as along core themes and will include international, cross-national, transnational and national levels of inquiry.

Goals

This course aims to provide students with a thorough knowledge and critical understanding of the role of energy in international history. Using a variety of academic literature, empirical examples, and encouraging deep engagement with primary sources, the course provides students with a thorough understanding of the major themes in international energy history. At the same time, they will learn different approaches to studying and various interpretations of energy history. It will encourage students to acquire research skills and to critically engage with historical events and their meanings as well as shape students' awareness of the complexities of historical inquiry.

Assignment Descriptions

All written assignments are related to one research project that students are interested in researching throughout the course. Students are expected to discuss the topic with the instructor.

Book Review:

A book review of 3 pages (max. 1,000 words) will be required for this course. Students should find a monograph that addresses their research topic. Students are expected to consult with the instructor about their choice of book. More specific guidelines will be made available at the beginning of the term. Please submit electronically on D2L.

Critical Essay:

A critical essay of 4-5 pages (1,200 words) will be required for this course. Students will critically assess three peer-reviewed academic articles on their chosen research topic. They will weigh the arguments as well as historical evidence put forward in these articles. Students are expected to choose articles through systematically searching relevant databases such as Historical Abstracts. Precise instructions will be made available at the beginning of term. Please submit electronically on D2L.

Research Essay:

A research essay of 12 pages (3,000 words) will be required for this course. This research essay will be on students' chosen research topic and will address a specific research question, which students will have to discuss with the instructor beforehand. The research essay should be based on a wide reading of primary and secondary sources and include at least 10 sources in addition to the book and the three essays that are part of the book review and the critical essay. Precise instructions will be made available at the beginning of term. Please submit electronically on D2L.

Participation:

Part of the course grade, as detailed above, will depend upon regular class participation. Students are expected to have read all required readings before class and to engage in the class discussion on these readings. Please note that attendance is not participation.

Course Plagiarism Policy

I expect all students to be familiar with the plagiarism policy of this university, which is described in the section on academic misconduct in the University calendar. Please ask me if you have any questions or concerns. There is absolutely no excuse for not knowing what plagiarism is at the university level, and all cases of plagiarism will be referred to the Associate Dean of the Faculty of Arts.

Plagiarism:

Plagiarism occurs when one submits or presents one's work in a course, or ideas and/or passages in a written piece of work, as if it were one's own work done expressly for that particular course, when, in fact, it is not. As noted in The History Student's Handbook (http://hist.ucalgary.ca/sites/hist.ucalgary.ca/files/history_students_handbook_2015.pdf), plagiarism may take several forms:

- Failure to cite sources properly may be considered plagiarism. This could include quotations, and wording used from another source but not acknowledged.
- Borrowed, purchased, and/or ghostwritten papers are considered plagiarism, as is submitting one's own work for more than one course without the permission of the instructor(s) involved.
- Extensive paraphrasing of one or a few sources is also considered plagiarism, even when notes are used, unless the essay is a critical analysis of those works.
- The use of notes does not justify the sustained presentation of another author's language and ideas as one's own.

Plagiarism is a serious academic offence and written work that appears to contain plagiarized passages will not be graded. All such work will be reported to the Faculty of Arts' associate deans of students who will apply the penalties specified in the University of Calgary Calendar.

Universal Student Ratings of Instruction:

At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses (www.ucalgary.ca/usri). Your responses make a difference. Please participate in USRI Surveys.

Academic Accommodations (implemented July 1, 2015):

The student accommodation policy can be found at: ucalgary.ca/access/accommodations/policy.

Students needing an accommodation because of a Disability or medical condition should communicate this to Student Accessibility Services in accordance with the Procedure for Accommodations for Students with Disabilities ucalgary.ca/policies/files/policies/student-accommodation-policy.

Students needing an Accommodation based on a Protected Ground other than Disability, should communicate this need, preferably in writing, to the course instructor.
