This course is concerned with the social history of modern Britain. We will be particularly interested in the major socio-economic developments that occurred in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries to set the stage for the acceptance (or rejection) of plutocratic, middleclass values in the twentieth century. You will be required to present two book assessments, a research paper and a critique of a classmate's research paper in class. You will also be expected to prepare for and participate in our weekly discussions of subjects related to the presentations and to submit an annotated bibliography of all the books assessed in class.

The Book Assessments:

The book assessment will be about six double spaced pages in length and will provide a thorough examination of the author's central argument and his/her most important sub-arguments. It will also provide an in-depth analysis of the author's supportive evidence and sources; and it will illuminate the book's place in the extant historiography.

The Annotated Bibliography:

The annotated bibliography will provide a short description of each book assessed in class, its central argument and a very brief summary of its scholarly value.

The Research Paper:

The research paper will be 12 – 14 double spaced pages in length (about 3,000 words) including footnotes and bibliography, and it will conform to The History Student's Hand Book; A Short Guide to Writing History Essays, https://hist.ucalgary.ca/sites/hist.ucalgary.ca/files/EssayHandbook1_0.pdf.

Students are encouraged to incorporate primary source materials into their research.

Further discussion of requirements will be provided in class.

Plagiarism:

Plagiarism occurs when one submits or presents one's work in a course, or ideas and/or passages in a written piece of work, as if it were one's own work done expressly for that particular course, when, in fact, it is not. As noted in The History Student's Handbook, plagiarism may take several forms:

- Failure to cite sources properly may be considered plagiarism. This could include quotations, and wording used from another source but not acknowledged.
- Borrowed, purchased, and/or ghostwritten papers are considered plagiarism, as is submitting one's own work for more than one course without the permission of the instructor(s) involved.
- Extensive paraphrasing of one or a few sources is also considered plagiarism, even when notes are used, unless the essay is a critical analysis of those works.
- The use of notes does not justify the sustained presentation of another author's language and ideas as one's own.

Plagiarism is a serious academic offence and written work that appears to contain plagiarized passages will not be graded. All such work will be reported to the Faculty of Arts' associate deans of students who will apply the penalties specified in the University of Calgary Calendar.

Universal Student Ratings of Instruction:

At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses (www.ucalgary.ca/usri). Your responses make a difference. Please participate in USRI Surveys.
