Course Description

This course will focus on Nietzsche's philosophy: we shall study three of his most representative works. We shall also examine one volume of Heidegger's study of Nietzsche, and Gilles Deleuze's Nietzsche and Philosophy as a significant and original taking up of Nietzsche's thought in the second half of the 20th Century. Classes will address the relevance of Nietzsche's ideas for contemporary philosophical questions.

Prerequisites:

Two previous courses in Philosophy, one of which must be Philosophy 309 or 311.

Course Learning Outcomes

- Students will read difficult, complex books that they are unlikely initially to understand.
 - Further, students will learn to determine whether the book or chapter is positioning itself against another view, either explicitly or implicitly, and be able to state what this view is.
 - Finally, students will acquire the ability to reread and analyze these books on their own and be able to articulate the major and minor arguments made to support the overall argument.
- Students will be able to ask probing and pertinent questions about any material that they do not understand, or ideas that confuse them, or viewpoints with which they disagree. Students will realize that all questions are good questions (with the exception of: "What did we do last class?").
- Students will learn to write essays that contain clear, convincing, grammatically correct arguments.
