Course description	This course will introduce you to dramaturgical models and tools with a focus on strategies of creation and audience reception. First we will work through script-analysis and New Play Development and then we will address some of the complex dynamics and choices you need to be aware of when navigating areas of physically, design, or sound based creation – areas such as theatrical devising and performance art. This course is designed for upper level students with a healthy portion of analytical curiosity and a wish to discover how it can be useful in practice.
	Students will be offered mini-lectures, tasked to discuss and report on different cases in groups, and asked to complete supervised analyses and exercises in class. You will also be assigned either academic or practical preparation tasks demanding 3-5 hours of your time per week. Finally, students will be tasked to apply their artistic and analytical skills to the development of a new play or creation project.
Course learning	The learning objective of this course is to develop:
outcomes	 Dramaturgical awareness of what your mode of looking enables you to work with and how that affects the creation you are engaged in. Ability to shift between and try out different creative approaches with awareness of how each affects the script or performance being developed. Tools to analyze how different approaches "work". Some capacity to arrive at practical strategies for a creative process, compositional choices, and audience experiences.

Acadomicintogrity
Academic integrity,	The University of Calgary is committed to the highest standards of academic integrity and plagiarism	honesty. Students are expected to be familiar with these standards regarding academic honesty and to uphold the policies of the University in this respect. Students are referred to the section on plagiarism in the University Calendar (ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k-2.html) and are reminded that plagiarism Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it—is an extremely serious academic offence. Consequences include failure on the assignment, failure in the course and possibly suspension or expulsion from the university. You must document not only direct quotations but also paraphrases and ideas where they appear in your text. A reference list at the end is insufficient by itself. Readers must be able to tell exactly where your words and ideas end and other people's words and ideas begin. This includes assignments submitted in non-traditional formats such as Web pages or visual media, and material taken from such sources. Please consult your instructor or the Student Success Centre (TFDL 3rd Floor) if you have any questions regarding how to document sources.
