COURSE NOTES

CONTENT WARNING: There is strong language and content in rap music and therefore in this course. Students are free to be offended, but any student who cannot manage this intrinsic aspect of the course is encouraged to drop the course early, to make way for students on the waiting list.

ATTENDANCE: Adams and Edwards's books are great, but only go so far. There is no textbook in rap linguistics per se. So the real work of correlating rap and linguistics will take place in class (and in homework). Lectures notes will be available on D2L at class time and may be revised between lectures, based on class discussions. However, lecture notes will be in point form only and may omit certain details and examples presented in class. Moreover, there will be in-class practice exercises. Students should therefore make every effort to attend classes on time to avoid missing material and practice that might be crucial to homework and exams.

EXAMPLES: Each student is expected to share—on ten occasions—a striking example from a rap song of something discussed in class, using an online form (which uses a strict format). The link to submit an example will be posted on D2L and emailed to all students shortly after each lecture. The deadline for submitting an example is 9 PM of the following day. A few examples from students will be presented at the beginning of the following lecture as recap.

EXERCISES: There will be three exercise assignments given out as part of this course, worth 10% each. You will be given at least ten days to complete each assignment. These assignments will be described in detail when they are handed out.

EXAMS: There will be both a midterm worth 20% and a final exam worth 30%. The final exam is cumulative, but it will focus on topics and material covered in the second half of the class. Make-up exams will not be given except in the case of dire, documented medical emergencies. The midterm exam will take place during class time on Tuesday, Feb. 26. The registrar-scheduled final exam will take place during April 15–27 (inclusive). The final exam is cumulative, covering all topics covered throughout the course. A review will be held in-class during the last lecture on April 11.

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

1. Plagiarism is a serious offence, the penalty for which is an F on the assignment and possibly also an F in the course, academic probation, or requirement to withdraw. Plagiarism exists when:

- a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test);
- b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author;
- c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or
- d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted."

Plagiarism occurs not only when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement but also when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. A bibliography is insufficient to establish which portions of the student's work are taken from external sources; footnotes or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose.

2. Cheating at tests or examinations includes but is not limited to dishonest or attempted dishonest conduct such as speaking to other candidates or communicating with them under any circumstances whatsoever; bringing into the examination room any textbook, notebook, memorandum, other written material or mechanical or electronic device not authorized by the examiner; writing an examination or part of it, or consulting any person or materials outside the confines of the examination room without permission to do so, or leaving answer papers exposed to view, or persistent attempts to read other students' examination papers.

4. Any student who voluntarily and consciously aids another student in the commission of one of these offences is also guilty of academic misconduct.

Students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their courses and, where appropriate, instructors can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Centre in the Effective Writing Office (<http://www.efwr.ucalgary.ca/>) can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance.
