Required Text:

Cutler, Anne. 2012. Native listening. Language experience and the recognition of spoken words. Cambridge, Ma: MIT Press.

As e-version of this book exists in the library collection.

Additional readings will be provided for assignments in D2L

Course Description:

This course provides a specialized look at how we learn to be adept listeners of a second language (L2). It shows, on the one hand, how being a native listener of an L1 constrains how we listen to a new language, and, on the other hand, how our mind/brain is plastic enough to permit new knowledge and the emergence of new skills.

Goals:

To build on prior training in language acquisition and to develop detailed information about “words” and how they are processed and acquired in second language acquisition. We will focus exclusively on words as critical units of language linking sound, meaning, and grammar.

Outcomes:

On successful completion of this course, these are the knowledge and skills that students will have:

- (1) detailed knowledge of how we listen to speech and recognise words in our L1;
- (2) hypotheses about how we segment sound units in an L2;
- (3) some understanding of the principle mechanisms of language acquisition and how they work in the acquisition of L2 words;
- (4) some understanding of how we map prosodic units to units of grammar and meaning.
- (5) hypotheses about how L1 lexical knowledge constrains both speech and language processing and L2 learning.

UNIVERSITY POLICIES ON ...

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

PLAGIARISM is a serious offense, the penalty for which is an 'F' on the assignment and possibly also an 'F' in the course, academic probation, or requirement to withdraw.

The University Calendar states that "plagiarism" exists when:

- a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test);
- b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author;
- c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or
- d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted."

Plagiarism occurs not only when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement but also when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. A bibliography is insufficient to establish which portions of the student's work are taken from external sources; footnotes or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose.

2. Cheating at tests or examinations includes but is not limited to dishonest or attempted dishonest conduct such as speaking to other candidates or communicating with them under any circumstances whatsoever; bringing into the examination room any textbook, notebook, memorandum, other written material or mechanical or electronic device not authorized by the examiner; writing an examination or part of it, or consulting any person or materials outside the confines of the examination room without permission to do so, or leaving answer papers exposed to view, or persistent attempts to read other students' examination papers.

3. Other academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to, tampering or attempts to tamper with examination scripts, class work, grades and/or class records; failure to abide by directions by an instructor regarding the individuality of work handed in; the acquisition, attempted acquisition, possession, and/or distribution of examination materials or information not authorized by the instructor; the impersonation of another student in an examination or other class assignment; the falsification or fabrication of clinical or laboratory reports; the non-authorized tape recording of lectures.

4. Any student who voluntarily and consciously aids another student in the commission of one of these offences is also guilty of academic misconduct.

WRITING ACROSS THE CURRICULUM

- Writing skills should cross all disciplines. Students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their courses and, where appropriate, instructors can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Centre in the Effective Writing Office (<http://www.efwr.ucalgary.ca/>) can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance.
